

Empower Your Digital Freedom With Confidentiality

F1Mail™ - confidential email service

Your email is like a postcard, it can be read by anyone who wants to while it is being delivered. Worst than postcard, email leaves multiple copies on route to your inbox, so someone could read it at a later date; Postcard can be destroyed and left no trace, unfortunately, an email will never really disappear even though you may have explicitly deleted it.

Even though you may have nothing to hide and there is a need for openness, but there are more reasons why communication should be conducted in confidence. If there is a choice, won't you like to have some privacy?

To provide a reasonable level of privacy, all routers in the e-mail pathway, and all connections between them, must be secured.

Encryption helps to protect the email content, but keeping the encryption key safe and accessible is a much bigger challenge.

Another approach is to send a normal email to the recipient which contains no sensitive content but the information of that a privileged message is waiting at the (sender's) secure mail facility.

F1mail is a confidential email solution. Its security and confidentiality features are made available by 3AKey and JANUS, a ground breaking solution in Information and communication security. Confidential emails including attachments are stored at a secure central location, accessible only with authorized 3AKey.

F1mail is a secure webmail application. Individuals can use the service to share information with others in a protected environment, or to use it as Data Vault online.

For organizations, F1mail gives you the confidence that your most important communication channel is secure as the contents of emails stay in your server. It prevents data leaks and minimize insider threats. The SaaS model would be the most cost effective way to establish your own confidential email service quickly; however, f1mail appliance is also available.
